Madness, now, begins to take a steady hold,
As one more tick is struck upon the list;
Respect, once second fiddle, now must shine like gold,
Reality, once nothing, now must not grow old,
Inspiration never now be missed;
And cares which once encompassed worlds must slowly fade away,
Giving rise to other petty cares from day to day,
Exciting no-one more along the way.
