When you can't unlock the spaces
Between the sad and lonely faces,
And their cares and woes leave traces
In your own;

When the whole wide world's around you,
Yet your loneliness surrounds you,
And one who loves you hasn't found you,
Don't feel alone;

He is there across the miles,
Sharing all your hopes and trials,
All your laughter, tears, and smiles,
With his heart;

And if he's sometimes prone to meekness,
Realise, behind the bleakness,
He's got the strength to meet your weakness
Set apart;

And if you ever feel you doubt it,
Don't just struggle on without it,
Keep on looking, help him shout it,
And he will;

If you keep the thought inside you
That he's the love and strength to guide you,
Then he'll be right there beside you
Up every hill.
