v1 These miles have left you weary, It shows upon your face, The seeping of another hour,

Another different place; But letting go of journey now, You'll make it homeward soon, Where, anchored fast, you'll turn around The tide that pulls the moon.

v2 This fortune has you listless,
Defeats have left their mark,
As aspirations slip away
From brilliance into dark:
But letting go of chances lost,
The turn round has begun,
Where, spark by spark, you'll fuel once more
The fire that lights the sun.

v3 Direction has you beaten,
We see it in your eyes,
Concession and confusion,
Desire that simply dies:
But letting go of precious past,
A future takes control,
Where, with new hope, you'll find at last
The man that drives the soul.
