v1 The days have brought a kindness,
The skies are soft and blue,
A blossom lines the hedgerows,
To usher me and you;
Just starting out together,
The early love that glows:
And hands that hold on tight,
So tight, as all the while
The river flows;

v2 Thirty years have passed now,
Yet still the sky stays blue,
Small birds still line the hedgerows
To sing for me and you;
And still the days feel warmer,
As love still gently grows,
And hands still hold, despite,
Despite that all the while
The river flows;

v3 Another thirty years now,
The skies have turned to grey:
And snow now lines the hedgerows
For love that's passed away;
The days without you colder,
An emptiness that knows
A longing for the light,
That spark of light from which
The river flows.
