v1 It breaks my heart just to see it today,
 Beneath the ravages of boulder and clay,
 The structure of a lifetime now crumbled away
 In what I once called home.

Ch1 I used to talk of memories
 That stirred within the blood:
 Now all that I remember
 Lies buried in the mud.

Ch2 I used to speak of wishes
 In prospects that abound:
 Now all I ever wished for Lies ruined in the ground.

v2 It chokes me up just to see it this way,
 Beneath the savages of weathered decay,
 The sparkle of a lifetime now faded to grey
 In what I once called home.
