CODA

v1 When the rage has all but passed,
And the still descends at last,
We will find a time, with all the anger shed;
Where the failings of the day,
Of the things we didn't say,
Will seep away to something else instead:

ch1 There's a glow upon your face
That radiates through space,
Reaching to assuage and reassure;
And a warmth within your smile
That reminds me all the while:
You are still the lady I adore.

v2 When the fury's turned to clear,
And the only sound we hear
Is the almost noiseless ticking on the wall,
Then the words of me and you,
Of all we failed to do,
Will fade again to long familiar call:

ch2 There's a softness in your hair
That lingers in the air,
Damping down the storm we rise above;
And a promise in your eyes
That makes me realise:
You are still the lady that I love.
